PREFACE

1. The information set forth in this publication is the result of three years of intelligence collection. Much of the information has been "built" up from fragmentary reports given by individuals having dealings with the MGB in Germany, and an occasional deserter or defector who has been able to give confirming or correcting data. It is realized that the personalities listed herein are subject to constant change due to normal rotation at the end of a three year assignment abroad and/or the ever present security-based transfers within the various sectors of the MGB in Germany.

2. No attempt has been made to report the functions of nets, their composition or personalities of the MGB outside of the Soviet Zone of Germany, the composition of the "political" espionage units active under the jurisdiction of the Soviet Military Government in Germany, the "positive" intelligence activities of the Soviet Military Missions, etc. This publication confines itself to reporting only the MGB organization in the Soviet Zone of Germany.

3. The purpose of this publication is to afford a basis of confirming or denying basic "stories" told by alleged agents of the MGB discovered in the US Zone of Germany and/or by individuals offering information concerning the MGB in the Soviet Zone of Germany. Having such information in the field will thus make it unnecessary to transport such agents or information to a higher headquarters for evaluation of such information, which, in many cases, proves to be nugatory. Further, it should afford the working agent of the Counter Intelligence Corps the essential knowledge of the organization which he is attempting to counter.

4. It is intended that the information set forth in this publication be used for reference only. It is desired that in all circumstances the category "control" be adhered to in that this information is not to be disseminated to persons not cleared to handle classified material; that this information will not be contained in EEIs to informants; and that this information will not be presented during an interrogation.

5. Changes are received daily by this headquarters and such, when confirmed, will be substituted for addition to or substitution of the specific pages of this publication.

6. The personal descriptions of all personalities named herein are given in Annex I of this publication.

INTRODUCTION

7. Ivan the Terrible (1544-1584) is given credit for founding the first Russian secret political police. This police force was known as the Oprichina and was charged with the mission of discovering traitors and all enemies of the Tsar. Secret political police in one form or another were in existence during the reigns of all subsequent Tsars. The efficiency and ruthlessness which characterized the original secret political police, however, gradually declined. Prior to the revolution in 1917, such agencies were very mild in comparison to the earlier Oprichina of Ivan the Terrible. Present day Soviet propaganda pointedly enough, has re-named Ivan the Terrible "Ivan the Hero".

8. One of the first tasks of the new communist government after the revolution of 1917, was to establish a Russian secret political police force. On 20 December 1917, LENIN set up the CHEKA (Extraordinary Commission for the Suppression of Counter Revolution). The mission of the original CHEKA was to detect and liquidate counter-revolutionary civilian and military elements within the USSR. (It is important to note that the present Ministry for State Security, MGB, has been developed from the original organization of the CHEKA.) In March 1919, when the Comintern was founded, foreign intelligence, sabotage and control of the Communist Parties abroad became functions of the CHEKA. World criticism of the Soviet regime, and particularly the notoriety of the CHEKA, caused the Soviet government to re-name the CHEKA the GPU (State Political Directorate) in 1922. Even though the name was changed, the tasks and functions of the GPU remained those of the CHEKA. The GPU was charged with the maintenance of counter intelligence services within the entire Soviet Union, including the armed forces, and of military intelligence and counter espionage abroad. The strength of the GPU was approximately 100,000 in 1922. At this time the GPU already consisted of the basic bureaus which constitute the MGB today. In 1923, the GPU of the various Soviet republics were centralized into a united GPU, the OGPU, as a result of the second Soviet constitution which legalized the jurisdiction of the GPU over the entire USSR. The OGPU was responsible for the protection of the state and the maintenance of all public works and had access to all slave and penal labor.

9. By 1934, at home as well as abroad, the name OGPU had also become synonymous with tyranny and terrorism, a fact which was not conducive to good international feeling at a time when the Soviet Union intended to enter the League of Nations. Shortly after United States recognition of the Soviet Union, the name OGPU was changed to GUGB (Central Directorate for State Security), and placed under the jurisdiction of the NKVD (Peoples Commissariat for Internal Affairs). This situation remained in force almost continuously until 1943, and it largely accounts for the fact that the NKVD (redesignated MVD in 1946) is today improperly used as a designation for all Soviet secret police and secret intelligence officers. Since in addition to the GUGB, the NKVD comprised numerous police troops over all the Soviet Union, the GUGB members were either civilian clothes or NKVD uniforms and were conveniently buried within the large organization.

10. The NKVD reached the peak of its power and organization in 1939 after the invasion of Poland. The counter intelligence functions previously performed by the Land Army intelligence sections were absorbed by the special sections of the NKVD. Thus, the NKVD became responsible for the security of the army; its innumerable other duties ranged from secret foreign intelligence to the operation of fisheries and guarding of borders. Its total personnel was then estimated at approximately one million.

11. By 1941, the GUGB had grown to such cumbersome size that plans were under way for transforming it into an independent peoples commissariat. In March 1941, the NKGB (Peoples Commissariat for State Security) came into being. Due to the outbreak of the war with Germany, the newly formed NKGB was not considered properly organized to function smoothly as an independent commissariat. It quickly reverted to its former position as a directorate under the NKVD. Nevertheless, plans for the operation continued, and in May 1943, the GUGB again and finally separated from the NKVD and became the NKGB.

12. In March 1946, in order to have some of the departments of government correspond at least in name to their counterparts in the governments of the western powers, the title, "Peoples Commissariat" was changed to "Ministry". The NKVD and the NKGB now became the MVD and the MGB respectively.

13. In considering the functions and operations of the MGB, it should be remembered that from the beginning of the Soviet government, all organs of state security have been primarily party agencies subject only to formalistic governmental control. Until 1934 when the OGPU was incorporated into the MVD, little pretense was made that state security was any other than a party function, taking its authority and control from the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and from the Politburo. Theoretically, the MGB is not responsible to the Council of Ministers of the Soviet Union, while in fact, it is responsible only to Josef STALIN and the Politburo.

14. It is believed popularly that there are two major Soviet intelligence agencies, the MGB and the MVD. Actually only the MGB is the intelligence organization; the MVD is a police agency. Each is a separate ministry. There are no comparable organizations in the United States. If there were, all intelligence agencies from the FBI to the CIC would be under one directorship, and all police agencies from National Guard units to local sheriffs would be under another.

15. Since the organization of the MGB in early 1946, and through subsequent changes, particularly the streamlining effected in the fall of 1946, there now exist 25 directorates or branches of service in the Ministry of State Security. Eighteen of these are operational, and seven are administrative or service units. Of these only three operational and five service directorates are believed to function outside the boundaries of the USSR. Some of the basic operational directorates now functioning are:

a. INU (Inostrannoye Upravleniye - Foreign Directorate). INU is divided into 15 operating sections to carry out its various missions. The main function of this directorate is the gathering of political, economic, technical, naval and military intelligence in foreign countries. Other functions are as follows:

(1) Control and/or surveillance of all Russian emigre organizations and all anti-Soviet organizations outside of the USSR.

(2) Surveillance of all Soviet citizens abroad, especially members of Soviet diplomatic and trade missions.

(3) Support of persecuted Communist Parties abroad.

(4) Direction of subversive and sabotage activities and fomentation of strikes and revolts outside the USSR.

(5) Execution of reprisals, including assassinations, against members of Russian emigre organizations, members of anti-Soviet political groups, and outstanding anti-Soviet personalities.

b. SPU (Sekretno Politicheskoye Upravleniye - Secret Political Directorate). SPU is known as the direct heir of the earliest Bolshevik secret police, OMEKA; it is primarily concerned with combatting counter revolution and sabotage within the USSR, which includes close observation of religious activities within the country. SPU, therefore, is concerned with the elimination of all elements which are hostile or potentially hostile to the Soviet regime. SPU at USSR level is reported to be divided into seven operating sections.

c. KRU (Kontr Razvedyvatelnoye Upravleniye - Counter Intelligence Directorate). The responsibilities of the KRU are as follows:

(1) Protection of the Soviet population and all non-military institutions in the USSR against the activities of foreign agents.

(2) Protection of Soviet diplomatic missions in foreign countries from the activities of foreign agents.

(3) Counter espionage abroad, that is, determination of foreign intelligence service and hinderance of their actual operations at their source by identification of foreign targets and agents.

(4) Surveillance of personnel of other Soviet intelligence services within the USSR and abroad.

d. ECU (Ekonomicheskoye Upravleniye - Economic Directorate). The ECU, also known as the CEU (Glavnoye Ekonomicheskoye Upravleniye - Central Economic Directorate), is in charge of counter intelligence in industries and and agriculture within the USSR. It is held responsible for full factory production quotas, proper guarding of industrial centers, factory adherence to production plans, for the political reliability of all workers, and for immediate determination of any anti-Soviet activity. (Note: It is possible that the EKU ceased to exist when the MGB came into being in 1946. It has been reported that its functions have been taken over by other agencies, such as the guarding of installations by the MVD. Until confirmation is obtained, however, the EKU will be retained on the active operational directorate list.)

e. DTU (Dorozhno-Transportnoye Upravleniye - Road Transport Directorate). DTU is responsible for safeguarding all military and non-military cargoes in transport, direction of the work of the MVD railway militia branches, and control of civilian travel permits. Informant networks at railway terminals, ports and other transportation centers carry on necessary surveillance and are responsible to DTU's subordinate organs. DTU reportedly controls and supervises the execution of plans of transport offices, including the preparations of all transport organizations to operate effectively under any possible mobilization.

f. Directorate for the Security of Government Leaders. This directorate has the responsibility of guarding and protecting party and state officials, including STALIN, members and candidates for the Politburo, all members of the Central Committee of the All-Union Communist Party (Bolshevik), members of the Supreme Council of the USSR, of the RSFSR and of the councils of the various republics, members of the district party committees and all officials of the party organization.

g. OO (Osobyie Otdely - Special Section). The OO is a military counter intelligence directorate responsible for the detection of subversion and disaffection within partisan troops, not army troops, within the USSR. It is not to be confused with Osoby Otdel, which is now the GUKR (see next paragraph), although they were apparently the same directorate in 1943.

h. GUKR (Glavnoye Upravleniye Kontr Razvedyvatelnoye - Central Directorate for Counter Intelligence in the Armed Forces). Formerly known as SMERSH (Smert Shpiokam - Death to Spies), GUKR has the responsibility of discovering politically unreliable elements within Soviet armed forces and to prevent penetration of the armed forces by foreign intelligence. Counter intelligence functions in the Red Army were initiated in 1918 when numerous non-Communists were taken as military specialists, and it was believed necessary to keep them under constant surveillance to prevent contacts with the enemy. For this purpose, the military sections of CHEKA were established, subordinated not to military command, but to CHEKA. In 1922, when GPU replaced CHEKA, the military section was expanded to include counter intelligence control of all other branches of the armed forces, such as the air corps and the navy. With the formation of the NKVD in July 1934, these military missions were redesignated as "Special Sections" and known as the OO/NKVD. The term "Special Section" became synonymous with denunciation and spying, and in the spring of 1943 counter intelligence functions were placed under the command of the NKD (Narodny Komissariat Oborony - Peoples Commissariat of Defense) and were renamed OMR (Otdely Kontr Razvedki) which became popularly known as SMERSH. Officially the organization was called the OKa NKD. The NKD was replaced by the MVS (Ministerstvo Voorushyonnykh Sil - Ministry of Armed Forces) in early 1946, and the OMR was then placed under the Central Counter Intelligence Directorate. For a time the organization was referred to as the GUAR MVS, but in the summer or early fall of 1946 it was transferred to the MGB, where it remains. Thus, the terms OO, OMR and SMERSH are no longer used.

i. Partisan Directorate. The Partisan Directorate has assumed intelligence authority over Soviet partisan troops (militia). During the war this directorate was charged with the organization of espionage, sabotage and terrorism in the rear of the enemy and in full cooperation with the partisans. This directorate operates only within the USSR.

16. Other operational directorates, reliably reported as existing within the MGB, are listed below. Insufficient information has been received to discuss their composition, functions, or jurisdiction. Titles indicate the purposes and functions of most, the maintenance of state security in specific fields and the intelligence control of specific ministries. It is believed that the directorates listed here are within MGB headquarters and operate only in MOSCOW.

a. Central Intelligence Directorate (GRU - Glavnoye Razvedtvatelnoye Upravleniye).

SECRET

b. Directorate of Intelligence in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

c. Central Directorate in the Ministry of Internal Affairs.

d. Directorate of Intelligence and Counter Intelligence in the Ministries of Internal and Foreign Trade.

e. Central Directorate for the Control of the Purity of the Communist Party.

f. Central Directorate in the Ministry of Heavy Machine Construction.

g. Central Directorate in the Armaments Industry.

h. Operational Directorate.

i. Central Directorate for the Control and Maintenance of State and Military Secrets.

17. Sections of the KGB service directorates are attached to all operational directorates to carry out the numerous service functions such as investigation, technical supply, personnel administration, supply administration, and finances. Known service directorates are as follows:

a. SB (Sledstvennoye Byuro - Investigative Bureau or Directorate). The SB investigates and interrogates suspects, prepares legal dossiers on cases, and transfers cases to the prosecutor. The SB is thought to collect information about methods of foreign intelligence services.

b. SO (Spetsotdely - Special Sections). There are five numbered Special Sections. They are:

(1) First Special Section (files and card indices).

(2) Second Special Section (technical equipment and services). The Second SO is responsible for obtaining and maintaining radio, telephone, photographic, and chemical equipment, operation of laboratories for the production and improvement of all materials, censorship of mail, telephone, radio and code correspondence.

(3) Third Special Section (surveillance and search).

(4) Fourth Special Section (civil censorship).

(5) Fifth Special Section (cryptographic section).

c. Seventh Directorate of CUGB. This directorate handles the elaboration and deciphering of the most complicated ciphers and all types of codes. It is not to be connected with the Fifth Special Section, which operated within other directorates. The Seventh Directorate exercised complete control and supervision over KAMA codes and cipher communications during World War II, including violation of code cipher procedures.

d. INFO (Information Directorate or Section). INFO is reportedly a collection and compilation bureau which publishes daily top secret bulletins for STALIN, members of the Politburo, and certain other members of the Central Committee. Weekly reports are sent to such agencies as GPU, EKU, the Investigation Directorate, and the Directorate for the Security of Government Leaders.

e. GUK (Glavnoye Upravleniye Kadrov - Central Personnel Directorate). GUK is in charge of the personnel administration for MGB, the recruitment of personnel, and, probably, the administration of MGB schools.

f. AKh U (Administrativno-khozyaistvennoye Upravleniye - Administrative-Economic Directorate). This directorate, sometimes referred to as AKhFU, exercises the responsibility for general administrative and supply functions. Its sections are attached to all directorates of MGB to provide material, to maintain administrative records, to provide food, quarters, clothing, and transportation.

g. FO or FU (Finotdel or Finupravleniye - Finance Office or Finance Directorate). The FOS attached to directorates control the financial resources of the directorates. It is possible that the FO has been incorporated into the AKhU to form the AKhFO or AKhFU.

54 18. The actual formation of the MGB in Germany, as it is known at this writing, began in 1943 in Poland, and for that reason, this introduction will begin at that time and place. At the end of 1943, the intelligence operative groups of Commissar ZHUKOV (of State Security) were active in the Western Ukraine. This mission of the groups was to neutralize the anti-Soviet partisan organizations such as the UPA (Ukrainskaja Povstancheskaja Armija - Ukrainian Revolt Army) and the OUN (Organizatsiya Ukrainiskikh Natsionalistov - organization of Ukrainian Nationalists). As the Soviet Army moved westward, the Ukrainian operative groups followed and established networks in eastern Poland to provide security for the Polish government which was to be established. Immediately after the liberation of CHELM, the BERIUT government was formed to include a Ministry of State Security. In order to assist the Ministry in the creation of an efficient organization, Colonel General Ivan Aleksandrovich SEROV was deputized by Minister BERIA to assume command of the operative groups on Polish territory. His personnel consisted of approximately one hundred and fifty (150) officers whom he had either brought directly from the NKVD, NKGB and Smersh control offices in MOSCOW or had drawn from the Smersh officer reserve pool of the Second White Russian Army Group. At that time, the operative groups of the Second White Russian Army Group and the First Ukrainian Army Group were on Polish soil executing their primary mission of securing supply lines. Collaboration between the Smersh operative Groups and the SEROV Group were extremely close.

19. Because of the interesting similarity of the MGB mission in Germany as SEROV conceived it, and the assignments of the SEROV group in Poland in 1943, such are here presented in their two main categories.

a. on liberated territory -

(1) To combat the Ukrainian National Movement in Poland.

(2) To build networks of agents among the population and among the Soviet DPs evacuated by the Germans.

(3) To win partisans over to the Soviet side and, if that proved impossible, to eliminate them from the political scene.

(4) To organize a system of state security and, at the same time, to insure that it would be thoroughly Soviet controlled. The organization was to follow the pattern of the NKGB (now MGB), and the personnel were to be selected from Polish nationals who had fought with Soviet partisan groups or who had been Soviet agents in German occupied Poland.

(5) To maintain liaison with the Soviet Military commanders of the locality and to establish a network of agents among the officers of the Soviet Kommandanturas.

(6) To annihilate all reportedly anti-Soviet organizations.

b. On unliberated territory (Note: Applicable to the US Zone of Germany)

(1) To gather military information.

(2) To investigate all anti-Soviet leaders and to gather information which, at some future date, might be used to compel them to act as agents provocateur for the Soviets.

(3) To penetrate every underground movement and partisan group so that at the moment of liberation, smoothly functioning agent networks would be ready to neutralize any partisan activity.

20. In executing its functions on liberated Polish territory, the SEROV group paid particular attention to securing Soviet control of the IBP (Ministry of Public Security). The measures used to attain this end are still valid in Poland. A communist of long standing, Colonel ROKIEWICZ, was appointed Minister of Public Security, and under Soviet guidance, the Ministry was established on the pattern of the MGB with communists in all major posts. A system of Soviet counselors was devised to provide a guarantee that Soviet Intelligence Officers would be placed in positions from which they could approve or disapprove every action taken by the Ministry itself and all of its subordinate local units

One of the more important functions of the counselors was to observe the political attitudes of the Polish officials of the Ministry and to make appropriate recommendations for promotion or removal. It was no less essential, from the Soviet point of view, to compel the MGB to adopt Soviet methods in accomplishing its missions. The counselor system and a system of dual reporting went hand in hand; the activity reports of the MGB units were written by Poles and submitted to the next higher echelon; at the same time, the Soviet counselor with the unit composed his own report of the unit's activities which were forwarded to his immediate superior. Both the reports from the Ministry officials and the counselors ultimately arrived at the headquarters of General SEROV where they were compared.

21. It is pointed out that the same system used in Poland has been used in other countries within the Soviet sphere. Intelligence and secret police agencies have been constructed on similar lines and counselor systems have been instituted. The most recent example is the formation of the Czechoslovakian ZNB.

22. To fulfill its purpose in German occupied Polish territory, as in today's US occupied Germany, the SEROV Group divided the territory into sectors. Each operative sector was again divided into operative districts, and each district into several operative groups. Each operative group recruited communist inspired personalities to assist in executing its missions which were the penetration of political organizations, establishing of agent and informant networks in anti-Soviet groups, gathering of military information and the penetration of enemy intelligence agencies.

23. In January 1945, SEROV transferred his headquarters to WLOCHY near WARSAW and his operative personnel followed the Soviet advance into Germany. By April 1945 all Operative groups under SEROV had quit Polish territory and the effort to control Germany was established. June 1945 saw a number of other Soviet intelligence organizations active on German soil - the newly arrived groups of the MVD, the operative groups of Smersh of the four army groups, the networks of the MVD, MGB and Smersh which had been in Germany prior to the capitulation and the special networks within the VLASOV Army. To correct this disorganization, General SEROV was given control of all Soviet intelligence agencies in Germany, Austria and Western Europe. Thus SEROV united all of his units under one headquarters and staff and the MGB in Germany was born.

24. SEROV established a headquarters in POTSDAM which he staffed with essentially the same personnel he had had in Poland. The Soviet Zone of Germany was divided into five operative sectors, four for each of the Provinces and one for BERLIN. Under the command of these sectors, operative groups were activated. Operative groups were assigned to the Military Government agencies in all areas and at all levels. All of this was accomplished in accordance with the MGB set-up within the USSR. If the SEROV Group in POTSDAM was to be compared to a commissariate of the MGB in a Soviet Republic, the Sector in Germany could be compared to the USSR Region, the Group to a detachment in a district. The structure was the same, only the nomenclature differed. As to the significance of SEROV himself in the Soviet Zone of Germany, it is reported that he was a member of the War Council of Marshal SOKOLOVSKI. This position gave SEROV all the rights held by the wartime commissars in the USSR, particularly the right to interest himself in the affairs of SOKOLOVSKI. In view of the fact that SEROV, as is his present successor General KOVALCHUK, was the personal deputy of BERIA and STALIN, his word was decisive in many a question in the Soviet Zone.

25. The methods initially used by the SEROV Group in Germany differed little or none from those used in the territory liberated from the Germans. Two distinct phases are recognizable. In the first, agent networks were established, enemy elements were annihilated or imprisoned and communist organs of government were created. The second phase was concerned with the normal functions of the networks; to discover underground anti-Soviet movements, giving strength to political ideas and observing the populace in general. Although the agent networks are established in the first phase, the actual functioning is limited since the phase is characterized by mass arrest and mass recruiting. The second phase began in Germany about the end of 1945 after the reorganization of the MGB in Germany and the ferreting out of the main fascist elements. At this time, SEROV gathered together the elements of the SPO (Sretrno Politicheski Otdel-Secret Political Section), the KRO (Kontr Rasvedyvatelny Otdel - Counter Intelligence Section), the EKO (Ekonomicheskoi Otdel - Economic Section), the NN (Naruzhnoye Nabludeniye - Outer Surveillance), the Investigative Section, the Special Investigation Section, the Records and Statistics Section, Code Section, Personnel Section and the Military Section and the present organization was known. The KRO was, as it is today, concerned with the countering the intelligence activities of other countries in the Soviet Zone of Germany and the establishing of Counter Intelligence networks in the Western Zones of Germany. The MKU was concerned with the economy of the zone, with questions of reparation, transport, scientific research and the recruiting of German scientists for service in the USSR. The NN was concerned with the location of persons sought by the MGB, with conducting surveillances, with kidnapping, and if necessary, liquidating persons, etc. The other sections are identical with the present corresponding sections as explained later in this work.-book.

THE PRESENT CHAIN OF COMMAND

26. Due to the granting of a portion of the Provinces Pommern, Mark Brandenburg and Niederschlesien to Poland, the Soviet Zone of Germany was redivided into six (6) operational sectors. These sectors are known today as:

- a. Mecklenburg, with headquarters at SCHWERIN.
- b. Brandenburg, with headquarters at POTSDAM.
- c. Saxony, with headquarters at DRESDEN.
- d. Saxony-Anhalt, with headquarters at HALLE.
- e. Thuringia, with headquarters at WEIMAR.
- f. Berlin, with headquarters at BERLIN/WEISSENSEE.

The headquarters for MGB Germany moved from POTSDAM to BERLIN/KARLSHORST. Under the jurisdiction of each of these sectors, a variable number of sub-sectors were initiated and under these a variable number of group offices. Each of these group offices controls the activities of MGB personnel in a Landkreis or number of Landkreise or a city section, according to need and population. Where necessary, the group offices established field offices in various parts of their area. Each sector and sub-sector unit is staffed with the normal military staff and a fully manned seven section operations group. Below that level, due to the shortage of trained personnel and the need of such, the majority of units consisted of a commanding officer, an administrative officer and the required number of investigating officers. Investigative reporting follows the chain of command: Field Office to Group, Group to Sub-sector, Sub-sector to Sector, Sector to Headquarters, Headquarters to Ministry (MOSCOW). Case direction is in reverse.

THE STAFF

27. The MGB headquarters, sectors and sub-sectors are staffed with the following assigned personnel:

- a. Commanding Officer
(May have aid if sufficiently ranked, will have a personal secretary and a personal driver.)
- b. Deputy Commanding Officer
(In the majority of the Sectors there are two (2) Deputy Commanders, one overseeing operations and the other the administration. It is also currently reported that usually one of these deputies is in charge of constant security investigations against the assigned MGB personnel.)
- c. Adjutant
(Existing only on Sector or higher level. On lower levels, one administrative officer may be charged with the responsibility of being the Adjutant, the Personnel Officer, the Supply Officer and the Motor Officer.)
- d. Personnel Officer
(Will have assistants, commissioned and enlisted, with a secretary, according to level and number of personnel assigned.)
- e. Political Education Officer
(Conducts the weekly classes on political science and is actively engaged in party agitation.)
- f. Prison Officer.
(Usually assisted by one or two officer assistants, permanent personnel acting as prison charge of quarters, enlisted guards, interpreters and interrogators. In some instances, depending upon the size of the prison, there are doctors, usually female, also assigned to the Prison Section).
- g. Headquarters Commandant.
(Charged with normal house keeping, civilian personnel management, recreational duties.)
- h. Finance Officer.
(Normal duties controlling payrolls and the additional duty of controlling operational funds.)

SECRET

- i. Service and Supply Officer.
(Unit S-4. Usually assisted by one officer, one or two enlisted men or women. Uses a secretary.)
- j. Motor Officer.
(Has control of vehicle maintenance, dispatch of vehicles and drivers. It is to be noted that German or indigenous drivers are very seldom utilized.)
- k. Operations Officer.
(Unless the operations sections are taken over by one of the Deputy Commanding Officers, there is no one Operations Officer. The operations section on Headquarters, Sector and Sub-sector level are divided into seven separate sections, each independent of the other, each having chief of section. It is this section of the staff that represents the majority of the personnel assigned to a unit. Every section of operations has, in addition to the Chief of Section, an Assistant Chief of Section, a variable number of "case" officers and a variable number of agents. The sections are discussed in detail in paragraph 18 of this work-book.)

THE MGB OPERATIONS SECTION

28. Since the reorganization of the MGB by SEROV in Germany, the set-up of the operations section has undergone numerous changes. These changes can be accredited to two main factors: (1) The slow absorption of MGB "missions" originally separated from the SEROV net such as positive intelligence nets already in operation in Germany, Austria, etc., and (2) The changing of the mission of MGB as the NSDAP, SS, etc., persons were apprehended, as the elements of foreign nations began to penetrate into the Soviet forces, etc. It is only logical to assume that the greater problem in 1945-46 was, with the MGB as it was with US intelligence, concerned with war crimes rather than with intelligence. This was clearly shown in an intercepted MGB directive published by the Chief of the Opergruppe (Group) of HILDBURGHAUSEN, Sector Thuringia in early 1946 read as follows: "In accordance with instructions of the Chief of the GOTHA district ----- to reorganize within the next few days, the agent-operational work, to the effect that each operative of the Opergruppe should work in one direction, -----". In the District Opergruppe of the city of SUHL, four basic departments, the fifth - investigative and the sixth - administrative and supply, were created. The following objectives fall within the coverage of a department:

SECRET

(1) Department for elimination of leading personnel of the NSDAP, collaborators of the Gestapo, SD and other punitive agencies, agents of the Gestapo, SD and other punitive agencies, officer corps of the German Army.

(2) Department for elimination of espionage, diversionary (subversive agent personnel, leading personnel of fascist organizations, Hitler-jugend, and leading personnel of the Wehrwolf and their members.

(3) Department for work among political parties, trade unions, local autonomous agencies, industrial objectives and the clergy in Germany.

(4) Department of counter intelligence work in allied zones and also work among emigrants in the Soviet Occupation Zone and in the zones of our allies.

(5) Department of Investigation.

(6) Department of administration and supply.

At the present time, there is still a question of the exact responsibilities of the various sections. The following set-up has been repeatedly reported as being in effect at present:

Section I: Positive Intelligence

(Responsible for military, economic and technical intelligence in the western zones of Germany, with the situation in displaced persons camps in the western zones of Germany and with the activities of foreign intelligence agencies.)

Section II: Counter Espionage

(Responsible for coverage of US, British and French Intelligence agencies in the western sectors, with the recruiting and dispatching of agents into the western zones on counter intelligence missions.)

Section III: Counter Intelligence

(Covers possible German sponsored subversion. Maintains nets in such organizations as the German police, schools, churches, administrative and cultural groups.)

Section IV: Search Section

(The search section locates wanted persons, such as NSDAP, SA, SD, and SS personnel. Conducts investigations among German nationals concerning charges against MGB personnel. Utilizes the German K-5 and Kripo police.)

SECRET

Section V: Political Section
(Responsible for counter intelligence within the SMA, GAI and other German political Soviet sponsored organizations.)

Section VI: Investigative and Reporting Section
(This section handles all routine investigations and interrogations, and prepares cases for prosecution.)

Section VII: Archives Section
(Dossier preparation and files)

A recent deserter from the MGB reported that a slight change in the operations section was effected in the fall of 1948. This change has not been confirmed yet it is a logical change and one for better control, and as such, will be included in this work book.

These sections are as follows:

Section I: Concerned with the selection and recruiting of all informant networks.

Section II: Positive Intelligence and Counter Espionage. A combination of Section I and II above, thus placing all intelligence activities outside the Soviet Zone under one section.

Section III: Counter Intelligence. Identical.

Section IV: Political Section. Identical with Section V above.

Section V: Search and Surveillance. Identical with Section IV above.

Section VI: Investigative and Reporting Section. Identical with Section VI above.

Section VII: Archives. Identical with Section VII above.

RANK AND JOB RANK

29. In past interrogations, a confusing recurrence was the reporting of a company grade officer commanding a field grade officer. This may be explained in that MGB operatives hold positions by "job-rank" rather than army rank. In the majority of cases, the army rank will coincide with the job-rank. It is reported that all MGB personnel are paid according to their "job-rank" with percentages added for military rank and length of service. An MGB operative officer may be promoted in "job-rank" as it is felt that he has earned such promotion, however, army promotions are still subjected to normal time in grade restrictions.

30. The "job-ranks" as known are as follows:

- Operational Agent (Operativnyi Upolnomotchennyi)
- Senior Operational Agent (Starshi Operativnyi Upolnomotchennyi)
- Deputy Chief of Section, Group Level (Zamestitel Natchalnika Otdelenia)
- Chief of Section, Group Level (Natchalnik Otdelenia)
- Deputy Chief of Section, Sector Level (Zamestitel Natchalnika Otdela)
- Chief of Section, Sector Level (Natchalnik Otdela)
- Deputy Chief of Sector (Zamestitel Natchalnika Sektora)
- Chief of Sector (Natchalnik Sektora)
- Deputy to Deputy Minister (Zamestitel Zamestitelia Ministra)
- Deputy Minister (Zamestitel Ministra)
- Minister (Ministra)

Note: Positions without individual rank have the equivalent rank of a subordinate position on the next higher level, thus, the Deputy Chief of a Group will have the job rank of a Deputy Chief of Section at Sector Level; a Chief of Group will have the job rank of a Chief of Section at Sector Level; the Chief of a Sub-sector will have the job-rank of Deputy Chief of Sector.

ACCOMMODATIONS

31. MGB offices, for the most part, utilize buildings previously used by the Germans as Court Houses or Civil Administration offices. The normal MGB office in a small city can usually be found in the former Amtsgericht. Most such buildings contain cell blocks or have a jail or prison. The average MGB agent is billeted in private family quarters in the general vicinity of his operative office. Since the majority of agents are officers, they enjoy the privileges of same, private rooms and bath. Whenever possible, the offices and billets are located within one or more blocks so that the entire area can be enclosed. Most enclosures are made of wood, solid, are from three to four meters high and are usually topped with two or three strands of barbed wire. There is usually only one entrance into the enclosure, this being guarded constantly. In small units, such as group offices, the office is usually consolidated with the local SMA office or with the MVD office in that town. There is an extensive use of cover houses and meeting places. Great care is taken to secure the identity of informants. Cover houses are changed frequently.

SCHOOLING

32. All operational MGB Agents and Senior Agents, as well as accredited administrative personnel are subjected to schooling. The two main topics of instruction are Political Science and the German language. Recent defectors state that all instruction is given between ten o'clock and twelve o'clock in the morning and usually four days a week. A defector from WEIMAR stated that his unit studied three hours of political science a week and six hours of German language a week. There are no intelligence training schools for MGB personnel. Agents needing basic or refresher courses are returned to the USSR for such. There are numerous intelligence schools for informants, however, instructing in all phases of intelligence work.

WORK SCHEDULE

33. The compulsory work hours for MGB agents are strenuous. The normal work day begins at 1000 hours in the morning and ends at 0100 hours the following morning. Below is a typical normal work day schedule. This schedule is followed during the five work days of the week. On Saturday, it differs in that school is held from 1000 to 1200 and the work period from 1200 to 1600 hours. It is currently reported from various points in the Soviet Zone that due to an excess of work, the majority of units are working even longer hours. This is applicable more specifically to Section VI of operations who are currently working seven days a week, full schedule, each day ending at 0300 to 0500 in the morning.

1000 - 1600: Work and school period, no breaks.

1600 - 1630: Dinner

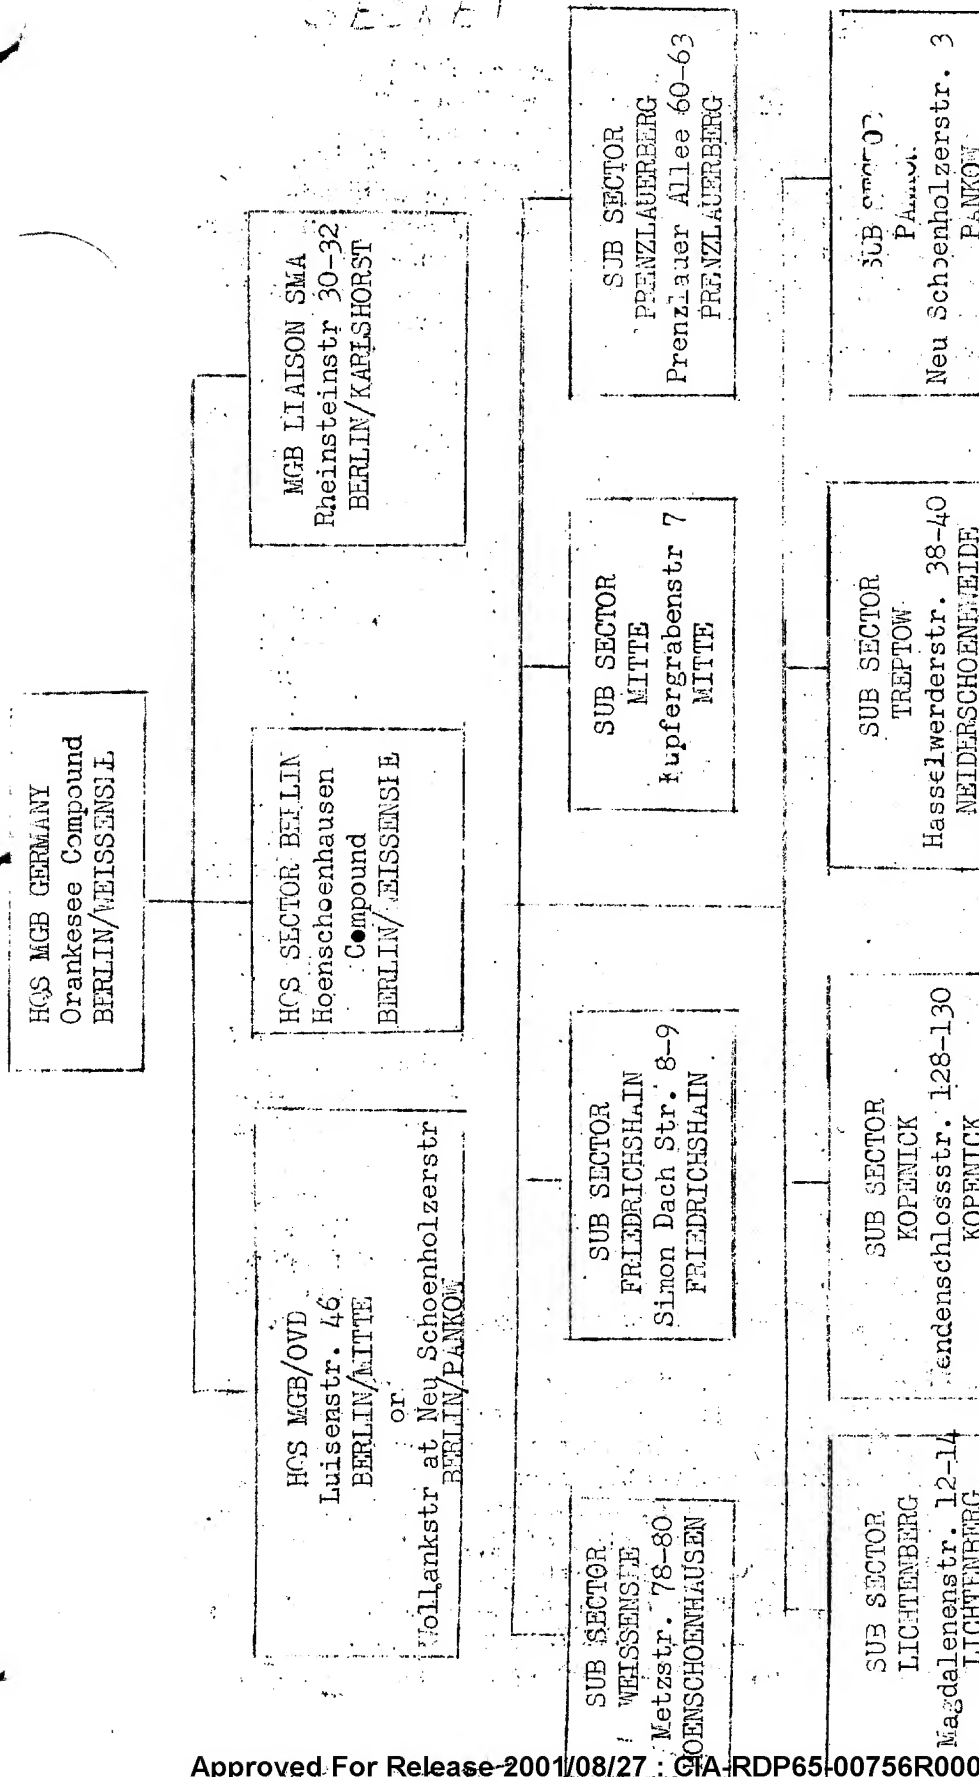

1630 - 2000: Free period

2000 - 2030: Supper

2030 - 0100: Work period.

Special Note

It has previously been reported that the Headquarters for the MGB in Germany was located in BERLIN/Karlshorst with the Headquarters for the Soviet Military Administration. It has been determined now that the high level MGB unit located at this address is either, as specified herein, OVD/MGB offices or Liaison Offices to SMA. The structure of the Headquarters of MGB for Germany, Headquarters for the Soviet Sector of BERLIN, its subordinate sub-sector or field offices, the OVD units controlling activities of the German Ministry of Interior, and the MVD troops used to protect MGB, OVD and SMA installations is as intricate and confusing as the operations of the units themselves.

In order to properly understand the structure, it is necessary to understand that (1) the MGB is not subordinate to any other Military or Civilian agency in Germany, it being commanded by a Plenipotentiary Minister of MGB subordinate to the Minister of Internal Security in the Politbureau only, (2) that inasmuch as it has the mission of controlling the security of all official Soviet Military and Civilian organizations in Germany and the Mission of building the control over the newly organized German Minister of Interior, the controlling arm of the new Soviet German Government, the MGB must maintain two, (2) high level branches, the liaison staff to SMA (allegedly including high ranking officers working directly out of the Central Political Directorate of the Armed Forces) and the OVD. Because of the presence of high ranking MGB personnel in high level Military or Governmental offices, it is often considered that the MGB Headquarters is located therein or that the MGB is subordinated to the SMA. Neither allegation is correct. In addition, the ever present confusion between MVD and MGB presents a large problem inasmuch as there is a MVD Division located in BERLIN (Gruenau) for the purpose of giving protection to the various offices in the city. The presence of MVD troops in or near a specific building often causes German sources to assume that the installation is MGB or MVD. All SMA offices and Soviet Kommandaturas are surrounded by stone or wooden fences and are patrolled by MVD guards as are the MGB installations. The presence of MVD patrols cannot be used as an identifying factor.

The compound housing the Headquarters for MGB Germany is very large. It contains many offices and sections not found prevalent in lower echelons. This is explained in that the majority of all high level missions are controlled directly from the headquarters and are not disseminated to the Sectors, Sub-sectors or lower units. Such missions are (1) High level penetration of US, British and French Governmental Agencies, (2) Control of the German Government Security and police agencies, (3) Control of the Main Administration for Soviet property abroad (i.e. A. G. WISMUTH Uranium mines, etc.) and high level penetration of US, British and French Intelligence.

SECRET

It is interesting to note that the Soviet Army Counter Intelligence Directorate has its chief of Counter Intelligence against the United States assigned to MGB headquarters and not to the GUKR Headquarters in POTSDAM.

Further, the designation "SMA" as used throughout this publication as an abbreviation for the Soviet Military Administration is acknowledged to be incorrect. However, until proper identification of the Soviet political unit which succeeded the military unit in October 1949 is made and the subsequent changes of the machine understood the use of the term will continue for convenience sake only.
